Netpas Distance Crack

The quickest way to find the distance to any port is to search a list of all possible port names from your country of choice, type the name of the port you are looking for in the search box, and then, if you want, click on the link to see the distance. With the new Voyage Manager you can perform a voyage for any port of any country in seconds. You can set the number of voyages (in case you need several trips at different times of the year), select the minimum time on the ship in days, set the level of comfort (ballast, bunker, speed of the vessel etc.), and choose the port you want to visit, all in the Voyage Manager. The speed of your trip is calculated automatically, no need to enter the speed of the vessel if you have it in your database. If you have a construction or other back-up project (e.g. towing), you have the chance to enter information about the vessel at the port of destination by changing the vessel itself. The vessel manager allows to view the status of the voyage (your vessel's current position and estimated arrival time). There are a lot of details that you can enter in the vessel database such as the vessel kind (liner, super-liner, towboat, tugboat), type of the vessel (passenger, car/passenger, motor, cargo, freight), estimated size of the vessel, speed, predicted time of arrival at the port and location of the vessel. The Anti-Piracy Route will calculate the vessel's trajectory according to the probability of piracy and possible alerts. It supports over ten thousand ports and enables you to create your own routes which you can then edit with the use of just your mouse. The application displays a user-friendly interface with a very well structured design, which splits the main window into sections for the map, results table and various route details. Finding a distance between two ports using Netpas Distance is as simple as double clicking in the table, adding the port names and then clicking the 'Get Distance' button. The application allows you to manually enter the port name or its coordinates to locate it. If your memory lacks that information, Netpas Distance allows you to choose a country and displays all the ports that exist. A function that you can find most useful in Netpas Distance is the "Create Voyage" feature. With it, you are able to create a route, set its number, speed with ballast into consideration and bunker consumption. You also get to use a voyager report that provides information about the current whereabouts and status of your vessel. It offers data about port, speed, current, distance, time, ETA arrival time and more. Netpas Distance enables you to constantly update and increase your vessel database. You have the possibility to use a 'Vessel Manager' to which you can add new ships and enter a large amount of details about them such as vessel kind, type, estimate values, speed, bunker consumption, operational expenses, build date and remarks. And in case you're worried, Netpas Distance is even fitted with an 'Anti Piracy Route' feature which recalculates your trajectory according to known information about such risks. In closing, Netpas Distance
