1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates to the field of information delivery systems. More particularly, the present invention relates to the delivery of audio and/or visual media content to a user over a communications network. 2. Description of the Prior Art The use of electronic communications networks to disseminate audio or visual media content has grown in recent years. In particular, electronic communications networks, such as the Internet, have made it possible for computer users to access audio and/or visual media content on a global scale. In a typical information delivery system, a user may access an information delivery service on a communications network using a communications platform. The communications platform provides a connection to the communications network, such as the Internet, and may be a terminal, a personal computer, a lap-top computer, a palm-top computer, an electronic organizer or a personal digital assistant. For example, the platform may be a personal digital assistant, a portable computer, or a palm-top computer. When the information delivery system is implemented as an application, the user can specify the information that the application will deliver from the user's computer, such as documents, audio files or video files. While the communications network is a vast source of information, many users may find that the amount of information that they are able to access is limited in many respects. For example, the information may include specific information about specific events. These events may be, for example, sporting events, theatrical performances, trade shows or conferences. The information may be a product or service. In an attempt to increase the accessibility of information, advertisers, promoters and creators of the media content have implemented various methods to communicate information, such as product or service offers, about an event to a user on a communications network. For example, there are message boards that are operated by a publisher for the event, in which the user can post message boards of information about the event that are accessible to other users of the message board. However, a user does not have a way to conveniently access the message board with the information that he wishes to access on a particular day. Further, it is difficult to include all aspects of the event with the message boards, thereby limiting the amount of information that is accessible to the user. In another example, advertisers have created a number of online services and forums that are dedicated to an event. However, these services and forums typically only provide information about the event to those users who are pre-selected to be offered a product or service of the
