1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a connection structure for connecting a rack in which a plurality of parallel rail members are parallel to each other in a vertical direction, and a sliding member provided in the rack.

2. Description of the Related Art Some image forming apparatuses are configured to place a print sheet cassette on a table or other suitable position of a lower half unit and to feed the print sheet to a print unit by conveying the print sheet with the aid of a sheet conveying roller. In addition, these image forming apparatuses may be configured such that a tray on which a paper supply cassette is placed is attached to a unit frame or the like with the tray placed at a position above the unit frame. In these cases, a configuration in which a transport guide (hereinafter referred to as a "transport path") is formed in the tray, and a lower half unit transport path formed in a lower half unit is slidably connected to the transport path in the tray has been disclosed. In the transport path of the lower half unit, a plurality of transport rollers are arranged between the transport path and the printing apparatus. The tray transport path is provided adjacent to the transport path of the lower half unit. In such a connection structure, the tray and the tray transport path in the lower half unit are connected by inserting the upper portion of the transport path in the tray. In order to support and slide the connection structure, a retaining rod (hereinafter referred to as a “lower-half-unit-retaining-rod”) is provided, which is capable of moving along the lower half unit transport path, and a
